When Correction Becomes an Act of Charity

We often think of charity as being kind, encouraging, forgiving, or helping someone in need. But sometimes charity requires us to correct another person. Jesus gives us a clear instruction: "If your brother sins against you, go and tell him his fault between you and him alone" (Mt 18:15). Notice that Jesus does not say, "Ignore it," or "Get even." He says, "Go and correct him." Correction, when done properly, is not an act of hostility or punishment but an effort to "gain your brother." Charity seeks the good of the other and includes helping others grow in holiness (CCC 1822–1829).

The key, however, is why we correct. Saint Augustine makes an important distinction: we should correct another person not because we want to hurt them, embarrass them, or prove that we are right, but because we love them. He warns that if our correction is motivated by the desire to do harm, we can actually become worse than the person who has sinned. Some other times, our silence is not kindness; it is simply fear, laziness, or the desire to avoid an uncomfortable conversation. We can become so concerned about preserving a friendship that we fail to tell someone what they need to hear. True charity loves someone enough to risk a difficult conversation. But how we correct matters greatly. Jesus tells us to begin privately. When someone has done something wrong, we should approach that person like a physician approaching someone who is sick—not like a prosecutor looking for a conviction. Christ's own way of approaching people was marked by closeness, compassion, and tenderness. Correction that comes from the heart seeks restoration, not humiliation.

There is also a humility that must accompany correction. Before we try to remove the splinter from another person's eye, Jesus reminds us to look at the log in our own (Mt 7:3–5). We must ask ourselves: Am I doing this for my brother or sister, or for myself? Am I seeking their good, or simply trying to make them feel guilty? Saint Augustine says that when we correct someone, we should be willing to forget the injury done to us while still caring about the harm that may be affecting the other person. This is why fraternal correction belongs to charity.

Ultimately, charity is not the same as avoiding difficult truths. Jesus loved people too much to leave them trapped in sin, and his love was never separated from truth. The Sacred Heart of Jesus shows us what this looks like: a heart that is compassionate but never indifferent, merciful but never approving of what destroys us. The next time someone we love needs correction, may we ask the Lord for the courage to speak, the humility to examine ourselves first, and the charity to make sure that our words are truly intended to "gain our brother" for Christ.

LIVING OUR FAITH

What does it mean that God is almighty?

To say that God is almighty means that God has unlimited power and can do everything that is truly possible and consistent with His own nature. He is the Creator of everything, and nothing outside of Him can limit His power. However, God cannot do things that are logically contradictory or contrary to who He is—for example, He cannot make a square circle, make something both exist and not exist in the same way at the same time, or lie, because He is Truth itself. This is also why the question, "Can God create a rock so heavy that He cannot lift it?", is not a real limit on God's power: if God creates a rock that He can lift, He is almighty; if the rock is defined as something that an almighty God cannot lift, the question contains a contradiction in its definition. In other words, God's omnipotence does not mean that He can make contradictions true; it means that nothing genuinely possible is beyond His power.

Call to action: Praise God for He is almighty and give Him thanks for He wants to be close to us.

GOSPEL

One day someone might sin against you. Friends may hurt your feelings. A neighbor may take your toy without asking. Remember what Jesus said. Remember that you sin, too. Talk it over quietly, just the two of you, and give your friend a chance to apologize.

PRAYER

Be with me, Jesus, when someone has hurt me. Help me to forgive. Amen.
